

Join the building industry and keep Canada's communities safe

- Building officials are needed more than ever to ensure homes and buildings are safe, sustainable, and up to code.
- You can contribute to the safety of these homes and buildings by becoming a Building Official.
- Building Officials are responsible for inspecting homes and buildings during the construction process to make sure they meet the requirements of the building code.
- Build a career in public safety.
- Contribute to a safer community.

For more information on becoming a Building Official please contact your local Building Officials Association

You can move into a career as a Building Official if you:

- work in the trades or a related construction role
- possess a diploma in architecture, engineering, or construction technology
- are licensed as a professional engineer or architect

MAY IS BUILDING SAFETY MONTH ACROSS CANADA